Lighting Plant's Most Successful Year

Profits Will Exceed All Others Say Officials-Norwich Men Give Opinion On the Department, to Waterbury Inquirer.

The past year has been the most successful in the history of the gas and electric department, since it became a part of the city government, say the officials of that department. Superintendent Bogue and a member of the gas and electric commission stated on Sunday evening that the department will show the largest profit ever has in its seven years. This applies both to gas and electricity. The officials stated that the amount of profit could not be told just yet, and no figures would be mentioned by them, but the fact that it exceeds all others should place the profit for one year at $30,000 or better.

It has been a year of extensive improvement at the plant and also planning for the future. The electric output has increased nearly 25 per cent, over last year and is increasing at the present time at that rate monthly. The city of Waterbury is considering the municipal ownership of a lighting plant and a representative of the Waterbury American was here last and business men on the success of the local municipally operated plant. The Waterbury voters will decide the matter at the polls this fall and The American of Saturday gave a history matter at the polls this fall and The American of Saturday gave a history of the local plant, the litigation and its accomplishments and comparing the rates in the two cities, which showed Norwich to be very much low-er for electricity, but 15 cents higher a thousand for gas.

The following are the interviews secured by The American representa-

Mayor Thayer's View.

Mayor Charles F. Thayer, a demo-crat, the admitted father of municipal ownership of light in Norwich, is as enthusiastic as ever about it. "The experiment here," he said, a enthusiastic as ever about it.

"The experiment here," he said, a few days ago, "has been an unmitigated success, a 'howling' success. The facts prove that for themselves. Why, if we had just barely pulled through the first five years, reducing prices a little and paying our expenses, we should have been proud of ourselves. But as the reports of the city treasurer show, we have not only done that but we have paid into the treasury a clear profit of almost a hundred thousand dollars. At first the project had many enemies. It became at once, unfortunately, a political issue, the bitterness of which is just dying out. Many people opposed the scheme for a few years merely for political reasons. In general the democrats favored it and the republicans opposed, though the 5 to 1 vote on the question showed how many republicans favored it.

"Of course we did have to pay a great deal more than the plant was worth, after being involved in a legal tangle. But we saved about $200,000 by litigating it and even with the handicap we had, we have made a success of the scheme. Our plant which we purchased for $590,000 is worth at least $1,000,000 today.

"One objection to municipal ownership, of course, is that changing administrations keep the management of the plant in new and unexperienced hands and that political wire pulling is difficult to keep out. This has hands and that political wire pulling is difficult to keep out. This has bothered us but little. Politics did interfere a couple of years ago, to be sure, but we are gradually risding ourselves of that evil. The present gas commissioners are all republicans, two of them being men who have kept in touch with the situation since its inception. We have perfect confidence in our commission." fidence in our commission The Opposition Gives It Up. For years the leader of the opposition was A. Walton Pearson, editor of the Norwich Bulletin. Mr. Pearson opposed Mayor Thayer in this, as he did in the big Norwich water contro-"The gas commissioners say that The gas commissioners say that they have a balance of $20,000 every vear, clear profit," said Mr. Pearson. "That may be true. The great trouble is you can't get at the city's business any more than you can that of a corporation. We opposed the scheme at first because we didn't think it would profitable, but there has never been an inquiry—a strict one—about the city's management of the business, and the citizens are all perfectly sat-isfied. I do not want to cast any reflections upon decent men.

"I don't see that the city's plant "I don't see that the city's plant differs from a private corporation very much. It has all the faults of a private corporation—and all the virtues. One objection to the plan is that a great many people living in the suburbs of the city who use neither electricity nor gas have to help pay for the costs of a plan of this kind, but do not share in its benefits. That's the bad feature of speculative lighting. Another point is that of bonds, which should be particularly interesting to you people in Waterbury. If you take over your lighting plants, steps should be taken to refund the bonds—if there are any—at a lower rate of interest.

be taken to refund the bonds—if there are any—at a lower rate of interest. We falled to do that, and it's going to cost the city a lot of money.

"So far as the figures show, the experiment has been a success. I personally don't know much about the inside facts of the case. I wouldn't care to say, really, whether it has been a success or not. I do know, though, that public opinion here controlled. though, that public opinion here considers it a great success.

Politics Out of It. Frederick W. Cary, vice president of the state board of trade and prominent in Norwich's business and politi-cal life, said: The growth of our lighting plants rhe growth of our lighting plants since the city adopted them has been wonderful. The experiment has been the greatest success imaginable. If any persons are discontented, it is chiefly for political reasons. People who are in business and buying electricity and asset from the city would tricity and gas from the city would never vote to sell the municipal plant. Of course we paid too much for the plant, but not as much as we should have had to pay if we had waited ten "Politics? No. I don't think politics has entered into the matter of run-ning the plant at all. Our gas com-missioner holds office for three years, whereas the elections come every two or four years, so that there is usually no changes in the board unless for an

no changes in the board unless for an urgent reason. Waterbury would do well to follow our example.

Mr. Story. Too.
Gas and Electric Commissioner Arthur E. Story was made a member of the commission by Mayor Costello Lippitt, the leader of the opposition party.

"When I was put on this commission," said Mr. Story, "I was very much opposed to the experiment, for I thought it wasn't a success. Since then I have become persuaded through studying the facts that Mayor Thayer is right, and that our municipal gas and electric plant has been a decided Herman D. Rallion, a prominent been a great success. It has reduced rates and is satisfactory in every way. I shall do everything in my power to help along the cause."

"I know it for a fact," declared Mr. Murphy, of Murphy & McGarry, "that Norwich has the cheapest lights of any city in New England. That isn't hearsay, but what I know. There is a difference of opinion here as to the success of the plan, but most of the citizens are warmly in favor of it."

NORWICH PEOPLE GOT EXCITED OVER MONEY

Good, New Bills Which Some One Thought Were Counterfeit Caused the Trouble.

Norwich was visited by a counter-feit money scare on Sunday morning that assumed such considerable pro-portions that the trolley conductors received orders not to take any of the supposedly spurious $1 bills, passen-gers arrived protesting at Franklin square to know why their good United States money was refused, some mer-chants and hotels caught the alarm and also declined to accept the new crisp williams that were making the trouble, and many of the citizens spent some anxious moments looking over their pocketbooks to see how badly they had been caught with the samples of "the queer."

The bills that started the trouble first appeared in Putnam, it was reported here, and were new, bright, silver certificates of the $1 denomination. bearing the words "Series of 1899." Somebody noticed these words were printed along the end of the bill inprinted along the end of the bill in-stead of under the number on the face of the bill. This variation, taken with the fact that the bills were new and crisp, developed into the supposition that they were counterfeits, and it was rumored that a Putnam bank had refused to take them.

Assistant Supt. Blake, who is in charge of the northern district of the trolley lines of the Connecticut com-pany, sent word to Treasurer Vaughn pany, sent word to Treasurer Vaughn here that the bills were affoat and orders were issued to the conductors to refuse all that were offered. The news quickly spread that the trolley-men had spotted a counterfeit that was in circulation, and although it was found that the money was genuine, and the order to the conductors was countermanded by noon, the rumors about the false greenbacks continued of the bills. A passenger arriving from New London with seven of the $1 certificates which he had received in his pay the day before, was furious at the conductor, who refused to accept one when tendered for fare, and demanded an explanation at the starter's office. an explanation at the starter's office in Franklin square.

One man who heard of the fake money was moved to sudden generosity when he found that he had two of the 1899 series in his pocket. Some of the conductors found they were hard hit when they first got the were hard hit when they first got the order. One of them had four of the bills, another had two, and many of them had at least one, for which they knew they would have to make good
